The Indiana Governor's Award was established in 2006 by the Indiana State Historic Records Advisory Board (SHRAB) to recognize successes in the field of historic records. Recipients are chosen by the SHRAB from the submitted nominations. Candidates for the award should have made remarkable contributions to Indiana historic records, the archival profession, or a related field during their career. Significant contributions may include extensive or superior volunteer work in an elected or appointed role; unusually important innovation, leadership, or crisis management; and notable success in expanding the visibility and/or support of Indiana's Historic Records. Outstanding contributions to the archival community may include work or activities that have dramatically improved the preservation of or accessibility to historically valuable documents or records, or that have resulted in a significantly better public appreciation of archival work and activities. Nominations are due by November 15.
